Brief

Chongqing's customs and local culture are imbued with the flavor of Bayu. Dining options include the bubbling red broth of hot pot, spicy and fragrant small noodles, and traditional fried dough twists (mahua) and strange-flavored broad beans, all common street vendors. The architecture retains the ancient charm of stilt houses, with old teahouses nestled amidst the bluestone slabs of Ciqikou. Sichuan opera performances of face-changing and fire-breathing are commonplace. Festivals feature the Tongliang Dragon Dance, while the humorous Chongqing dialect can be heard daily. The Yangtze River Cableway and the uphill climbs showcase the vibrant energy and energy of this "8D Mountain City."

Why Go Here

- Enjoy magical scenery
- Savor spicy delicacies
- Experience the charm of Bayu

Eating

Chongqing cuisine is sizzling hot and full of the spirit of the underworld. The hot pot is bubbling with crispy tripe, springy duck intestines, and the aroma of the beef fat broth permeates the air. The chewy noodles and spicy condiments tantalize the palate, making them a commonplace on the streets. Geleshan Spicy Chicken, with its crispy exterior and tender interior, is a delightful dish brimming with the flavor of the chilies, revealing the rich flavors of Chongqing in every bite.

◆ Chongqing Hotpot 重庆火锅

The beef oil base of Chongqing hot pot is bright red and boiling hot, the tripe is bouncing around, the duck intestines are crispy and tender, it is spicy and numbing, and you can taste the hot and spicy flavor of the mountain city in one bite.

◆ Chongqing Noodles 重庆小面

Chongqing noodles are a morning ritual in the mountain city: the alkaline noodles are cooked until chewy, topped with red oil, minced garlic, bean sprouts, and a spoonful of mixed sauce or peas. The spicy and fragrant noodles are wrapped around the noodles, and you can taste the street life in one bite.

◆ Geleshan Spicy Chicken 歌乐山辣子鸡

Geleshan Spicy Chicken is a representative dish of the mountain city. It is stir-fried in hot oil to create a crispy aroma. Red peppers are wrapped around tender chicken, creating a spicy and numbing taste. The more you chew, the more delicious it becomes as you try to find the meat among the peppers.

◆ Hot and Sour Noodles 酸辣粉

Shancheng Hot and Sour Noodles are tempting in themselves: the noodles are soaked in the hot and sour sauce, and paired with crispy peanuts and crunchy pickled mustard greens. They are sour and appetizing, and spicy enough to warm your heart.

◆ Maoxuewang 毛血旺

Chongqing Maoxuewang is the spiciest dish among Jianghu dishes! The duck blood is tender and springy, while the tripe is crispy and crispy. Paired with luncheon meat, duck throat, and bean sprouts, the dish is smothered in a spicy red oil broth, creating a zesty and spicy flavor that hits your taste buds.

◆ Red Oil Wonton 红油抄手

Chongqing red oil wontons are a hearty street food favorite! These wontons, with their thin skin and tender filling, are dipped in bright red chili oil and sprinkled with sesame seeds and chopped green onions. The juicy flavor bursts out when you bite into them, making them incredibly satisfying.

◆ Qianjiang Chicken Offal 黔江鸡杂

Qianjiang chicken offal is a representative Tujia flavor of southeastern Chongqing and a hallmark of Chongqing's Jianghu cuisine. It's even listed as a municipal intangible cultural heritage. Fresh chicken intestines, livers, hearts, and other offal are paired with Qianjiang's local pickled peppers, pickled ginger, and fresh scallions. Tujia chefs stir-fry them over high heat, instantly bringing out the freshness of the ingredients. The chicken offal is crispy and tender, devoid of any fishy flavor, and coated in a spicy, sour, and appetizing red oil broth. The potato strips at the bottom are soaked in flavor, soft and glutinous with a hint of pepper.
